Future Flight

You are invited to attend Virtual Tri-University Week 2020:

As your In-State Public Universities, Arizona State University, University of Arizona, and Northern Arizona University are coming together to ensure you and your family are well informed. They have teamed up to host joint virtual information sessions for prospective students and families to discuss the following:

- How to navigate the college admission process.
- Scholarships and financial aid.
- Information about each university.
- The honors experience at each university.

These sessions will go into detail about the opportunities and resources available to you. This experience will help you find your best college fit.

Many of our students apply to all three Arizona Public Universities to see which one offers them the best package. This event will help you with the application process for all three In-State Public Universities.

We highly recommend all students attend this virtual event.

Terms to Learn

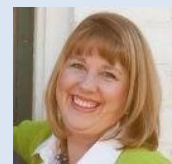

Public Universities/Colleges get most of their funding from state governments and can offer less expensive education typically for In-State students. The great majority of Division I athletic teams are fielded by public universities.

Private Universities/Colleges is an independent school that sets its own policies and goals, and is privately funded. Private colleges generally are smaller and have smaller class sizes than public universities. Some private colleges may have religious affiliations. Private schools usually have a smaller selection of majors but may offer more specialized academic programs.

Junior/Community Colleges are government-funded two-year colleges that grant associate's degrees and certificates. Students may consider transferring to a University after two years. Many of the students at these colleges live at home while attending, which is less expensive.

Trade/Vocational School is any post-secondary educational institution that offers training for a specific job. Students attend a trade school program to learn the skills needed for their chosen career path, such as welding, business administration, or computer repair. Trade schools are focused on quickly preparing students to enter the workforce in a skilled trade.
