Student Housing at Arizona Community Colleges

So many students are looking for colleges that give them the opportunity to begin living on their own. You may not realize this but there are a number of Arizona Community Colleges that offer Student Housing. Community Colleges have smaller class sizes and are a less expensive choice for students. Below is a list of the Arizona community colleges that offer dorm living.

Coconino Community College: Is located across the street from NAU in Flagstaff and gives students the opportunity to live in the NAU dorms while attending Coconino Community College. To learn more you can check out the CCC2NAU Program.

Chandler/Gilbert Community College: This college is part of the Maricopa Community Colleges and offers the Honors' Scholarship of Free Tuition for students who have a GPA of 3.25 or above. They also have a partnership with ASU for student housing and meals. The programs they are known for are Aviation, Artificial Intelligence, Mortuary Science, Electric Utility Tech, and Forensic Science. Click Here for more information.

Central Arizona College: This college is located in Coolidge, AZ which is about 56 miles south-east of Phoenix. This college has a wonderful music department. Popular majors include Liberal Arts and Humanities, HVAC and Refrigeration Engineering Technician, and Welding. Please check out more information here.

Yavapai College: This is a community college in Prescott, AZ that has their own student housing. Popular programs include: Liberal Arts and Sciences, General Studies, Humanities, Health Professions, Business, Management, Marketing, and Related Support Services. Career Connection:

Speech-Language Pathologist

Speech-language pathologists work with people who have difficulty speaking or swallowing. Their work involves evaluating patients for articulation, language or other problems and then prescribing a course of treatment. Also called speech therapists, speech-language pathologists usually need a graduate degree. The Median Salary for this position is around $77,510.00 annually.

Going to school in between Thanksgiving and Christmas Break feels like the last lap in Mario Kart where the music is all fast and gets really stressful.

Don't let the stress get to you

Don't let the stress of your senior year get to you. This time of year is a challenge to stay motivated for many seniors. Put yourself on a schedule to help you stay disciplined to complete your homework or to study. You need to also take time for your hobbies, exercise, and music to ensure you're getting enough "me time." Make sure you are well rested and remove your phone from your room at night to reduce interrupted sleep. If you find you are struggling, you can always ask for help. Your family, friends, guidance counselor, and even teachers are there for you. It's a big transition and they can offer a support network or assistance. Carry these tips with you as you head into college!

Award Letter

A financial aid award letter is the notification that students receive informing them how much financial aid a school is willing to offer.

All students that submit a Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), were approved for aid and accepted by a school will receive a financial aid award letter from that school. You may find that this notice is referred to by names such as "financial aid offer," "FAFSA award letter," or "financial aid package," but they are all basically the same.

An award letter is often received around the same time as college acceptance letters. This can vary depending upon the timing of your FAFSA submission and each school's administrative process. Financial aid award letters are only for one year of school. You'll need to complete the FAFSA every year to determine what aid you are eligible for and you'll receive a new award letter every year with that FAFSA submission.
